

Excerpt of Discovery Transcripts Wendy Lao

Q 129. Your counsel has provided your medical records and I understand that you were seeing a psychologist at the time of this incident. Is that correct?

A. Yes, I was a bit down with managing the kids and our finances but nothing like now.

Q 130. I understand. In the clinical notes of the psychologist, they seem to indicate that there were some marital problems with you and Henry prior to his untimely death. Could you tell me a little about that?

A. It was just normal stuff. The updates and downs of a long marriage. We were high school sweethearts. He was the love of my life. I have never even been with anyone else before him. He was the person I was expecting to grow up with and enjoy our golden years together.

Q 131. Okay, in the psychologist's records there is some mention to previous visits that you made in 2015. Do you recall seeing the psychologist in 2015?

A. That was a really long time ago. With everything that has happened, I just don't remember. I can barely remember what I ate for breakfast. The stress and trauma from Henry's death is really affecting my memory. Sometimes, I just sit and cry for hours, not even knowing where the time went. Then the kids come home from school and I haven't even cleaned up.

Q 132. Yes, I can understand. Counsel, can we have the psychologist's clinical notes and records from 2015 onwards.

A. Opposing Counsel: That is really far back and she does not even remember going to therapy at that time. We are going to take that as a Refusal.